BRITISH COLUMBIAN ROMANCE. Overturning of a Coffin Stopped a Marriage Ceremony.

A dispatch to the New York Journal from Vancouver, B. C., says: This story of how a dead lover forbade the bans. worthy as it is of the imagination of a Poe, comes from the wild region of mountain and lake which forms the interior of British Columbia.

Maud Cranston, whose home was at Kootenay Lake, had to choose between two wooers. Of these R. A. Carson was rich and unromantic, while James Carter was poor, but in all respects a stripling to engage a maiden's fancy. There were other considerations, however, and Maud Cranston chose the rich sultor. "You shall not marry him," said Carter to her, when he heard that the date was fixed. Floods came. The river broke from its banks. The clergyman was exiled on his ranch. Such of the wedding guests as had been able to reach the bride's home lamented with her over the disappointment. And James Carter, who was just starting on a lonely trip down the river, greatly changed in a few weeks, said:

"It is an ill omen. They will never marry."

Perhaps it was because she heard of this gloomy prognostication that Miss Cran-ston decided that she and her affianced would reach the clergyman, since he could not reach them. A day or two later they embarked, ac ordingly, on the steamer Kokanee, which would pass the minister's place on its way to Bonner's Ferry. He was sighted clinging to the roof of his house, which was submerged to the eaves. A boat from the water that covered his crops and he was Carson and Miss Cranston appealed to him to marry them at once, and he went to the cabin to put on a change of clothing proffered him by Captain Newman. While he was thus engaged the boat stopped at Rios Landing. Here a coffin—a plain pine box—was carried on board.

In it, said the gossips, was the body of a young man who had been drowned, now sent wandering in search of Christian boxis.

Maud Cranston was already in an overwrought state from many adventures and brooding over the strange words of her re-jected sweetheart. When the coffin was propped on deck-for there was no other propped on deck-for there was no other place for it-she became more agitated than ever and more anxious to have the ceremony performed at once. But when the minister reappeared and saw the coffin he thought that a wedding would be out of place in such close quarters with death. Only because there were fears for the girl's self-command did he prepare to fulfill his

A look of relief crept into Maud Cranston's face as the ceremony went on. But before it had reached the decisive stage two dogs chained near the coffin fell to fighting and overturned the two kegs on which it rested. As it tumbled to the deck the lid flew off and out rolled the body, al-most at the feet of the half-married pair. It was James Carter, his eyes wide open and his hair still damp upon his forehead. Only for an instant did the girl he had loved endure the agony of looking at his white face, for consciousness mercifully left her and she fell in a swoon by his side.

AFTER LONG SERVICE

Death Ends the Memorable Career of Admiral Crosby.

WAS NEARLY FIFTY YEARS IN THE NAVY

Many Notable Achievements Placed to His Credit.

WILL REST AT ARLINGTON

Rear Admiral Pierce Crosby died at 11:40 last night at his residence, 1718 Connecticut avenue, in this city. He had been ill several months, but the immediate cause of his death was acute diabetes. The funeral will be held at St. John's Church at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and the interment will be at Arlington. Admiral Crosby leaves a widow and five children, three daughters and two sons.

Long Naval Career. Rear Admiral Crosby was bern at Chester, Pa., January 16, 1824. He was descended from Richard Crosby of Moore county, Palatine, Chester, England. Richard Crosby purchased a large tract of land from William Penn in what is now Delaware county, Pa., and settled there in 1682. Rear county, Fa., and settled there in 1682. Rear Admiral Crosby received his early education from private tutors until his appointment as acting midshipman, June 5, 12.8. He was then ordered to the line-of-battle-ship Ohio, which sailed from New York to join the Mediterranean squadron, where she was made flagship to the commanding officer, the old here Commanders Issue Hull. officer, the old hero, Commodore Isaac Hull, Midshipman Crosby acted as aid to the commodore until his return to this country in 1841. He was next attached to the rein 1841. He was next attached to the receiving vessel Experiment at Philadelphia, and afterward to the steamer Mississippi, home station. In 1842 he was ordered to the frigate Congress, and sailed her from Portsmouth, N. H., to the Mediterranean.

After serving in her six months he was transferred to the slow Pership and retransferred to the sloop Preble, and re-turned to the United States in the fall of 1843, when he was ordered to the Naval School at Philadelphia. In May, 1844, he Sale of 50 head of horses on Saturday, June 17, at was promoted to passed midshipman. He next served on the United States coast sur-yey on the coast of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and also in the Susquehanna river and tributaries until the summer of 1846, when he was ordered to the sloop

> During the Mexican War. He served in her six months in the gulf of Mexico, during the Mexican war, participating in the attack and capture of Tuspan and Tobasco, and was then transferred to the gunboat Petrel, serving as acting master in Mexican waters until peace was declared. He was then tempeace was declared. He was then temporarily in command, and brought the Patrel to New York, the captain and other officers being too sick with fever for duty. In 1849 he was attached to the storeship Relief, carrying supplies to the Cape de Verde Islands, and to the Mediterranean squadron at Naples. In the fall of 1850 he was made acting master of the United States navy yard, Philadelphia. Eighteen months fater he was transferred to the re-ceiving ship stationed at Philadelphia until the spring of 1853, when he was attached to the frigate Savannah, at Norfolk, serving on her until September 3, 1853, when he was commissioned lieutenant. In the winter of 1853 he was ordered to the U. S. S. Germantown, sailing in the spring of 1854 from Boston to Brazil, serving as lieuten ant and executive officer, and returning to the United States in February, 1857. H was attached to the receiving ship at Philadelphia until the latter part of 1858. He was then ordered to the U. S. S. nen Fort Sumpter was attacked. Lieut Crosby was sent with a detachment of men, under command of Capt. Steadman, to keep open communication between Annapolis and Havre de Grace, carrying troops and and Havre de Grace, carrying troops and supplies to the army, as the railroads and bridges were destroyed between Perryville and Annapolis, capturing and destroying, by orders of the commanding general, conederate vessels in the bay and cutting rebel supplies and communications. In the summer of 1861 he was ordered to the frigate Cumberland, at Hampton Roads, but was detached for duty with the army and to police Chesapeake bay and tribu-taries. At this time also he transported across the Hampton river the troops which subsequently fought at the battle of Big Bethel, Va.

In August of this year he volunteered

In August of this year he volunteered upon the expedition against Forts Hatteras and Clarke. Taking possession of the steam canal boat Fanny, he secured her boilers to the spar deck with chains, navigated her around Cape Hatteras, and then proceeded, in company with the squadron, to the atin company with the squadron, to the attack on Forts Hatteras and Clarke, in order to have a light-draft vessel to operate in landing troops at that place. When the naval vessels commenced bombarding the forts, Lieut. Crosby superintended the landing of about 320 goldings of about 230 goldings. ing of about 320 soldiers, under Gen. But-ler's command. The heavy surf made the landing very difficult, wrecking eventually landing very difficult, wrecking eventually all the boats employed in carrying the men from transports, when Lieut. Crosby took the Pawnee's launch and landed two more boat loads of troops, until the sea became so heavy that it threw the launch upon the beach, dashing all hands out of her on the shore. Owing to the severe storm, the squadron and transports stood off seaward, leaving the troops on the shore unprotected until the following day, when the squadron returned, opened fire and silenced the forts. returned, opened fire and silenced the forts, the enemy hoisting the white flag. Lieut. Crosby, by Gen. Butler's orders, went on the Fanny to the forts, landed, and brought off Commander Barron and other officers in command, who surrendered, with 730 men, to Admiral Stringham and Gen. Butler on board the flagship Minnesota.

A Clever Ruse. During the previous night, by the display made by the troops landed, the confederates had been led to believe that their force was over two thousand strong. In this way the enemy was deceived, and our troops were saved from attack and probable capture, as nearly all the ammunition was wet, and the volunteer troops, being in a disorganized state, could not, in all probability, have suc-

state, could not, in all probability, have successfully opposed double their number. Lieut. Crosby succeeded in getting a strong picket thrown across the point in front of the enemy's batteries, thus preventing their making a reconnoissance or ascertaining the actual force of the Union troops.

Lieut. Crosby's efficient services on this expedition received special commendation in Gen. Butler's report. At this point Lieut. Crosby captured four blockade runners, they not knowing the forts had surrendered. In the fall and shortly after the capture of these forts he was ordered to the comnand of the gunboat Pembino, fitting out at New York, but was taken dangerously ill with typhoid fever, brought on by constant exposure, privation and fatigue in the performance of his duties. In the winter of 1861 he took command of the Pinola, the performance of his duties. In the winter of 1861 he took command of the Pinola, fitting out at Baltimore. Running the batteries on the Potomac river at night, he brought her to Washington, received her battery and sailed for the gulf squadron, joining Admiral Farragut's fleet at Ship Island. On the way he captured the schooner Cora, loaded with cotton, and sent her north as a prize. A Daring Achievement. He commanded the Pinola on the mem-

Itasca in breaking through the chain barrier across the Mississippi at Forts Jackson ard St. Philip. The chain barriers were supported by hulks across the river. The Pinola in the night ran up to within 200 yards of Fort Jackson; Lieut. Commander Crosby boarded one of the hulks, placing torpedoes on the chains and also outside of the vessels. Everything was carefully arranged, but owing to the mass of floating timber around the vessels, the strong current and dark night, the wires connecting the galvanic battery and torpedoes were broken just as the attempt was made to explode them.

A second attempt was being made, when a boat, arriving from the Itasca, an-

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midsummer of life, and he left his family $1,000,000. The doctor's certificate showed that death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend: "That man was a suicide, He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled." He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been so und. But he ruined his stomach had been so und. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and by neglect of symptoms which have been warning him a year past, that his stomach was falling in its duties."

The restoration of the stomach, digestive

The restoration of the stomach, digestive and nutritive organs to a condition of sound health, begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses from that dose until the functions of the stomach and its related organs are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet, the appetite healthful, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear. In one word the body is in a condition of perfect health.

"I was troubled with indigestion about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I cau do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Pive bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

the end of the cable on the shore opposite to Fort Jackson, and in so doing ran hard and fast aground. The attempt to blow up the vessels was reluctantly given up for the time, and Lieut. Commander Crosby went immediately to the Itasca's assist-ance. In so doing the Pinola drew the fire of Fort Jackson. Two hawsers were broken by the Pinola in freeing the Itasca; a third succeeded in floating her. In doing this work the Pinola passed beyond the barrier chain nearly to Fort St. Philip, and made the important discovery that the channel was clear.

Passing the Forts. After this Lieut. Commander Crosby participated in the bombardment and passage of Forts Jackson and St. Philip, Chalmette batteries and the capture of New Orleans; also in the bombardment, passage and re passage of batteries at Vicksburg and engagement with the rebel fronclad Arkan-sas. Lieut. Commander Crosby, after Ad-miral Farragut and squadron left the Mississippi river, joined the blockade off Mo-bile; was then ordered as fleet captain of the North Atlantic squadron, under Admiral S. P. Lee and during this time he commanded an expedition up the North river, co-operating with Gen. Dix. in comparison of the commanded and the comm mand of the army corps at the White House. At his request, in 1863, he was placed in command of the Florida on blockade duty off Wilmington, and destroyed two block-ade runners, assisting in the destruction of two others, while they were attempting to run into Wilmington just at daybreak, and in so doing drew the snarp fire of flying batteries on shore. In 1864 he was trensferred to the command of the Keystone State, on the off-shore blockade. On her he captured five blockade runners, causing he captured five blockade runners, causing many others to throw overboard their cargoes in order to escape. Ordered to the Muscoota, detached and ordered to the Metacomet, he blockaded with her off Galveston, Tex., and commanded her in the attack made by Admiral Thatcher and Gen. Canby upon the forts at Mobile. The naval vessels were prevented for a week from getting within range of the forts, on account of floating torpedoes, which had alcount of floating torpedoes, which eady destroyed two valuable ire several other vessels. Caught the Torpedoes.

Commander Crosby volunteered, and with Admiral Thatcher's authority planned and directed the construction of torpedo nets, spreading them across the Biakely river, about 400 yards in width, catching all the floating torpedoes sent down to destroy floating torpedoes sent down to destroy the vesseis. He also planned torpedo drag nets, superintended the capture and re-moval of 140 torpedoes, thus successfully clearing the channel and enabling the squadron to pass up safely to the city of Mo-bile. When the city and forts were evacuated our forces went up to Mobile and entered Forts Huger and Tracy on the night of Forts Huger and Tracy on the hight of the evacuation. Crosby was especially commended by Admiral Thatcher in his official reports for his services during the siege. In August, 1865, he was detached from the Metacomet and ordered to Philadelphia, where in the following month he received command of the Shamokin, in which he sailed for the South American station. He took the American minister Washburn to Paragraps which was at that time at war Paraguay, which was at that time at war with Brazil. He passed the Brazilian blockade under protest of the Brazilian admiral, but his action was sustained by his government. Promoted to captaincy May 27, 1868, he was detached and returned home, and acted during 1869 and 1870 as inspector.

and acted during 1869 and 1870 as inspector of ordnance at the Norfolk navy yard. Commandant at the Navy Yard.

He was executive officer at the Philadelphia navy yard during 1871 and 1872, commanded the Powhatan in 1872 and 1873, was then executive officer and acting commandant of the Washington navy yard until Ocant of the Washington navy yard until October, 1874. He was then commissioned as commodore and was in command of League Island navy yard for the succeeding three years, after which he was detached and placed on waiting orders. He was promoted to rear admiral March, 1882, and ordered to command the South Atlantic station. After one year's service he was ordered to the Asiatic station, where he took command April 29, 1883. While serving on this station he was placed on the ing on this station he was placed on the retired list, by his own request, and or-dered home in October, 1883, having been in active service more than forty-eight years, twenty-three of which were spent at sea. He returned home November, 1883, and since that time had resided in Wash-

WILL ADOPT THE GOLD STANDARD H. C. Payne's Views of Monetary Legislation by Next Congress. Henry C. Payne of Wisconsin, who attended the conference of the Senate finance committee, makes a statement that in his opinion a bill will be formulated at the coming session of Congress that will place the United States upon a gold standard basis. His statement is as follows: "It is my judgment, after being in consultation with the Senate finance committee members at the meeting at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, that a plan for the nue Hotel, New York, that a plan for the revision of our monetary system that will be satisfactory, not only to the Senate, but to the House as well, will finally be approved, and that that plan will be formulated into a bill which will become a law. "What will that law provide? It will provide for placing the United States upon a gold standard. It will be eminently satisfactory to the gold standard men and the friends of sound money. It will be satisfactory in its provisions even to me, and I believe I am about as ardent a gold standard advocate as there is, in this section at ard advocate as there is, in this section at least.

"I base this opinion upon what I know of the situation. Of course, no formal action of the Senate committee has been taken, but from expressions of members I have no hesitancy in saying that this monetary reform legislation will be brought about. It is certainly legislation that is needed, and that fact is fully realized by those who have the matter under consideration.

"With regard to the talk of a special session of Congress I would say that I do not believe that there will be a special session unless there should be some developments in the Philippine situation that would require action by Congress at a date earlier than the regular session. Personally I had thought that an extra session might be called for about November 1."
